 It is rare to see student teachers actually getting students to engage in self-assessment. Kaycee was able to do this with a good example being her handling of the students' presentations on a continent. All students were given the opportunity to tell the presenting group what they liked about the presentation and one thing they wish they could have added. This was done prior to the student presenting to all or the other third about the presentation and one thing they wish they could have added. This was done prior to the student presenting to all or the other third grade students. Students receiving the critiquing often responded to the suggestions favorably. She created some math assessments to use in her math groups. She used these to decide if students needed re-teaching or had a solid grasp of the skill.

The teacher engages in ongoing professional learning and uses evidence to continually evaluate his/her practice, particularly the effects of his/her choices and actions on others (learners, families, and other professionals, and the learning community), and adapts practice to meet the needs of each learner.

She was very open to feedback from her cooperating teacher and university supervisor. It is obvious that she is very intent on improving her instructional skills. Her reflections show the same thing. She is always looking to fine tune or come up with new ideas to enhance her instruction. She is very coachable. While doing her student teaching, she participated in staff development provided by the school district. She had particular interest in staff training on brain development.

Kaycee collaborated well with her colleagues and wasn't afraid of a challenge. She actively participated in staff meetings, staff development, PLC meetings, and grade level meetings. She presented herself in a professional manner and was willing to give input during discussions. She participated in the school's Parent-Teacher Conferences and interacted positively with parents. She was willing to share her perspective on behaviors and learning in a positive, caring, and professional manner.

Kaycee is completing her twelve week student teaching experience in third grade at Liberty Elementary in Bismarck, ND. It was exciting to see her growth throughout the teaching experience. She was a little tentative at first, but has grown into a very confident and more than competent teacher. She does a good job with classroom management and has developed a wonderful relationship with her students and the staff at her school. Students liked her and were willing to work for her. Her lessons were concise and well planned. She is a team player and works very well with others. The use of technology to enhance her lessons seemed easy for her. She showed desire, enthusiasm, and professionalism throughout her student teaching experience. She always presented herself in a positive and professional manner. She is definitely ready to begin her teaching career.
